Nem, nem tévedés: Hallgass újságot!

Ráadásul német és angol nyelven tedd ezt!

Iskolai könyvtárunkban van néhány fiataloknak szóló idegen nyelvű magazin, amelynek CD-melléklete is van.

Az angolosok a CLUB, a németesek a SCHUSS című újságot és CD-t kérjék, hiszen a magazinok és a CD-k ki is kölcsönözhetők.

A közelgő téli szünetre kellemes olvasgatást, CD-hallgatást kívánok.

THE A TO Z OF THE WORLD CUP

On 11th of June, the World Cup kicks off in South Africa. Read CLUB's guide to the greatest football event on Earth...

A is for Africa
This is the first time the World Cup has been hosted by an African nation. The tournament will create about 129,000 new jobs and boost the South African economy by over two billion Euro.

B is for Ball
The official ball used in this year's World Cup is called the 'Jabulani'. This means 'to celebrate' in the African language isiZulu.

C is for Captain ... and controversy
The England team was rocked this year when newspapers revealed that the England captain John Terry had been having a secret affair with another England player's ex-girlfriend. England manager Fabio Capello sacked John Terry, but the decision divided the nation. "Terry is a disgrace!" wrote one blogger. "His private life has nothing to do with his role on pitch!" replied another fan.

D is for David Beckham
Forget the fashion and the famous wife, football is David's first love and is what he's best at. This will be David's fourth World Cup, but despite his age, it may not be his last. "2014? Maybe!" he says. "I want to carry on playing!"

E is for England
For English people, 1966 means one thing – the year they won the World Cup. "I have never seen the English so emotional before or since," remembers Peter Shephard who was 17 at the time.

F is for Fans
350,000 fans are expected to travel to South Africa for the tournament to support their teams this summer, but there will be many more watching at home – 30 billion people in 240 countries will tune in!

G is for Golden Boot
The 'Golden Boot' is an award given to the player who scores the most goals in the tournament.

H is for Hairstyles
Some football players are more famous for their hair than their footballing flair. In 1998, the Romanian team dyed their hair yellow. David Beckham made headlines with his Mohawk in 2002 when hundreds of English boys copied him (and got in trouble for wearing the style to school!). But our favourite is Carlos Valderrama, the Colombian player – what a mane!
